The Swedish Bank Research Foundation (Bankforskningsinstitutet, BFI) supports academic research on financial institutions and markets.

The Swedish Bank Research Foundation awards scholarships especially for PhD-students, carrying out research in the selected field.

Call for scholarship applications 2019:

Individual scholarships for PhD students to cover living cost and related research expenses for up to one year at a time.

Individual scholarships for post-doc researchers can in exceptional cases also be considered.

Applicants who has received a scholarship can be considered for supplementary grants to cover costs of special research expenses that are essential to a particular project as well as travel grants. Applications for these grants are made on a separate form.

The size of the grants for academic year 2019/2020 will be determined by the foundation’s board of directors at its spring meeting. In academic year 2018/2019, grants to projects conducted for an entire year were (in SEK):

Doctoral Candidates
- Personal scholarships: 260,000
- Insurance (Health, accident) and retirement contribution: 60,000
- Research expenses: 25,000

Post-doc Researchers
- Personal stipend: 400,000
- Insurance (Health, accident) and retirement contribution: 85,000
- Research expenses: 40,000
