Learning outcomes

On successful completion of the course the student will be able to:

Knowledge and understanding

- show basic knowledge of gender theory and how theories on gender relate to education in different national and cultural contexts
- illustrate how theories on gender (and other intersections) relate to both social structures, practices and identity

Competence and skills

- describe and analyze different circumstances and conditions in current education systems from a gender (intersectional) perspective
- demonstrate the interrelationship between intersections such as gender, age, ethnicity, sexuality and how they affect different educational contexts

Judgement and approach

- critically compare different educational contexts within the Nordic countries from a gender perspective
- value and discuss conditions and ideas of equality, discrimination and equal rights.

Course content

The aim is to highlight different international perspectives on gender and other intersections and how they affect education. Special focus is put on how the area of gender research problematizes the complexity behind policy, implementation and praxis, but also on Sweden and its policy framework on gender equality. In the course we explore and use gender theories and different conceptions of gender and power on various levels from an educational perspective, to e.g. analyze for instance politics, media, curricula and teaching practices. The course also relates to conceptions and conditions of sexuality, social background, age and ethnicity.

Form of teaching

The course contains both mandatory seminars, lectures and written assignments. Students are required to come prepared to and actively participate in the mandatory seminars as well as writing and orally presenting two written assignments.

Language of instruction: English
